

JAY WATSON DESIGN

WHO: Australian Jay Watson is an independent designer-maker. Having worked in the manufacturing sector, he is able to exploit his technical understanding to explore new design concepts and develop innovative manufacturing techniques. He is based in Oxfordshire.

WHY: Watson's furniture often benefits from his experiments with structure, form, manufacturing techniques and materials. While he employs specialist firms to produce much of his work, he also produces high-quality bespoke commissions and prototypes in-house.

1. Anemoi is an LED pendant light, in five translucent Corian colours and three sizes. Fully dimmable on standard systems, the High Brightness LEDs offer a colour temperature of 4000k and rated for 100,000 hours.

2. Linger a Little Longer is fun statement about how precious we can be about furniture. The table and bench's thermochromic finish changes colour with heat, so cups, plates – even people – leave a temporary mark.

3. Read-all-About-It is a cube 'ottoman' made entirely from recycled newspaper. The piece can be made to order, but you can also make one at home by following an instructional video on Watson's website.
